

Legal News of the Day By Jim Weed

One of the advantages of working from a home office is the number of distractions one can encounter.

The news generally plays in the background; yes, I am a political junkie, but I also crank up the music when the world gets a bit too intense. Typically, I'm a country music fan but I also lean towards early jazz (Count Basie) and Big Band (Glenn Miller). AC/DC will also fill my speakers next to Five Finger Death Punch (content warning).

Needless to say, there can be a lot going on in the background as I write, research and generally learn more about Ferrari - the car and history.

Then something from the news catches my attention. One quick comment and it's gone. Hey! Wait a minute. Did I just hear that?!

A class action lawsuit has been filed in the state of California for business practices. It seems someone was denied a purchase because they had not previously purchased other items from that store.

The condition of sale was predicated upon being deemed 'worthy' to purchase. This caught my eye, or ear, as was the case, and I had to investigate further.

First, I should say I do not have a law degree. I did stay at a Holiday Inn Express once but that is no proof I know the law and I have tried most of my life to not be involved with the law. Civil or criminal. I'd like to keep it that way.

With that said, what follows is a characterization of the actual class action lawsuit and my observations of that suit and how it may relate to Ferrari.

The crux of the suit is as follows:

A luxury brand manufacturer creates a product, and that product is sold in stores. The item itself is very high-end and limited in availability. Only a few are made, and the price reflects the quality.

The product is so exclusive that only people who have previously made purchases of the lesser products this company sells could be considered as potential buyers.

The company itself has operated for decades designing and manufacturing goods. Its image and reputation are well known and distinctive. It has expanded to locations around the world and sells its product directly to consumers.

The company has forty-three stores in the USA with eight of those stores located in California.

According to the lawsuit, "The desirability of... a symbol of rarefied wealth - is such that not even a global pandemic can dull demand for it. In the second quarter of 2021 ... sales ... more than doubled from a year ago and rose by 24% from their pre-pandemic June 2019 levels."

"Despite the price and exclusivity, ... has become a household name and well known by the general public, both in name and by its distinctive design."

The court filing details the company and its practices. The case continues with the following:

"The unique desirability, incredible demand and low supply of ... gives Defendants incredible market power. Defendants implemented a scheme to exploit this market power by requiring consumers to purchase other, ancillary products from Defendants before they will be given an opportunity to purchase.... With this scheme Defendants were able to effectively increase the price ... and, thus, the profits that Defendants earn..."

"Sales Associates are tasked by Defendants with selecting those consumers who are qualified to purchase..."

"Sales Associates are tasked by Defendants with selecting those consumers who are qualified to purchase... These sales associates are directed by Defendants to only offer ... to consumers who have established a sufficient 'purchase history' or 'purchase profile' with Defendants of Defendants' ancillary products such as ... Only once a consumer has a sufficient purchase history or purchase profile with Defendants, will the consumer be offered the opportunity to purchase a..."

The impetus for the lawsuit began when the Plaintiffs attempted to make a purchase: "Plaintiff Cavalleri has spent tens of thousands of dollars at ... and had been coerced into purchasing Ancillary Products in order to obtain access to ... based on the practices alleged herein. In or about September 2022, Plaintiff contacted (the company) about purchasing another ... but was told specialty ... (products) are going to 'clients who have been consistent in supporting our business.' Plaintiff Cavalleri understood she would have to spend more on Ancillary Products to obtain access to another ... As a result, Plaintiff Cavalleri was unable to purchase another ... in September 2022."

"In or about 2023, Plaintiff Glinoga sought to purchase a ..., but was counseled by Defendant's sales associates to purchase Ancillary Products in order to potentially obtain a ... Plaintiff Glinoga made multiple attempts to purchase ... but was told on each occasion he needed to purchase other items and accessories. As a result, Plaintiff Glinoga was unable to purchase..."

"Plaintiffs are informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that Defendants tied Plaintiffs' access to purchase ... to a requirement that they spend more on other items, pursuant to the unlawful tying arrangement alleged herein."

As a class action lawsuit there are questions that must be answered to show the 'class' was damaged versus an individual. These questions are as follows:

a. "Whether the ... and Defendants' ancillary products are separate and distinct.

b. Whether Defendants implemented a policy to ensure that their sales associates would only sell ... to consumers with a sufficient purchase history of Defendants' ancillary products; and

c. Whether Defendants have sufficient economic power in the market for ... to coerce at least some consumers into purchasing Defendants' ancillary products.

d. Whether Defendants unlawfully tied the sale of... to the sale of ancillary products; and

e. Whether Plaintiffs and the members of the Class and Subclass have been damaged by the wrongs complained of herein, and if so, the measure of those damages and the nature and extent of other relief that should be afforded."

The lawsuit continues on to cite The Sherman Act, which prohibits "monopoliz[ation] of any part of the trade or commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations." (15 U.S.C. §2). It then details the sales conditions outlined above and how the Defendant violated this act.

It also details a violation of the Cartwright Act. California Business & Professions Code § 16700 et seq., which prohibits, inter alia, the combination of resources by two or more persons to restrain trade or commerce, or to prevent market competition. (Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code, §§ 16720, 16726).

"Under the Cartwright Act, a 'combination' is formed when the anticompetitive conduct of a single firm coerces other market participants to involuntarily adhere to the anticompetitive scheme."

The Cartwright Act also makes it "unlawful for any person to lease or make a sale or contract for the sale of goods, merchandise, machinery, supplies, commodities for use within the State, or to fix a price charged therefor, or discount from, or rebate upon, such price, on the condition, agreement or understanding that the lessee or purchaser thereof shall not use or deal in the goods, merchandise, machinery, supplies, commodities, or services of a competitor or competitors of the lessor or seller, where the effect of such lease, sale, or contract for sale or such condition, agreement or understanding may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly in any line of trade or commerce in any section of the State." (Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code, § 16727).

"As detailed above, Defendants have unlawfully tied their (product) to their ancillary products through their sales associate incentive program."

And finally, a violation of California's Unfair Competition Law Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code, § 17200, et seq.

"Plaintiffs have standing to pursue this cause of action as Plaintiffs have suffered injury in fact and have lost money or property as a result of Defendants' actions as delineated herein."

"Defendants' scheme, as delineated herein, constitutes unlawful business practices in violation of California Business and Professions Code sections 17200, et seq."

"Accordingly, Defendants' violated, and continues to violate, California Business and Professions Code section 17200's proscription against engaging in unlawful business acts or practices."

"As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' unlawful business practices, Plaintiffs and the Class have suffered injury in fact and lost money or property, in that they purchased ancillary products from Defendants that they did not want or could have purchased elsewhere."

In August 2016, I wrote "Man Bites Dog or Ferrari Gets Sued" about a lawsuit the late Preston Henn had brought for not being able to purchase a LaFerrari Aperta.

I freely admit I have removed identifying references to the company named in the lawsuit. I find the premise interesting because it would appear there are parallels to the business practice of a certain automobile manufacturer.

If you were to add the word 'Ferrari' in the missing spots it would almost describe what it is like to buy an exclusive item from them.

In August 2016, I wrote "Man Bites Dog or Ferrari Gets Sued" about a lawsuit the late Preston Henn had brought for not being allowed to purchase a LaFerrari Aperta. His denial sparked the litigation and ultimately Henn dropped the suit. Maybe it was the two cars Ferrari may have 'gifted' him that helped ease the pain.

There is no denying to own a Ferrari is special, and exclusive. Because I'm at the center of history, information and yes, sometimes rumor, I get the chance to see and hear from many different people.

I found this case to be fascinating and you can do your own research. The actual court filing can be found under Cavalleri et al v. Hermes International.

Handbags are not Ferraris, but the sales aspect would appear to be similar. I think Ferrari would want to closely watch this case as it moves forward.

One lawsuit in California will not change the entire sales philosophy of a company like Ferrari, but it could ultimately affect sales in California.

Back to the news of the day.

Why does service cost so much?

By Jim Weed

You know how much I love a 400 GT. I purchased a 1979 400 Auto from Beverly Hills Car Club several years ago. This was a car I had seen at the FCA International Meet in Columbus, Ohio. It was bronze (Bruno Mogano to be exact) with tan interior and while not a perfect example was still a clean and honest Ferrari.

New Ferrari ownership is always exciting. We drove it to dinner and ice cream. We took it to Italian Car Day at Ferrari of Atlanta. We drove it to a couple of local car shows and it always draws lookers.

Most don't have a clue it is a Ferrari until they see the badge. Even then most have never seen one like this before. Admittedly the 400 GT is not what you think of when the word Ferrari comes up.

But there is a V-12 under the hood and with three side-draft Webers filling each side of the engine compartment it makes for an impressive sight when the hood is opened.

It came to me with about 42,000 smiles and I have added another couple thousand smiles since then. As I've gotten to know this car and have had a chance to really inspect all the nooks and crannies, I have come to appreciate just how original and honest this car is.

With a bit of work, I think it could be a Preservation car as most everything is original and complete. But...

There are some things every Ferrari needs. Service and maintenance. Mine leaks a bit of oil (shouldn't all old cars do that?). It doesn't run quite as well as I remember them when I drove many as service manager. So, I should dig into this car and perform a full service.

This sporadic column is going to chronicle the trials and tribulations of what it is like to work on and maintain a Ferrari. I know most do not do their own work so this will not be a how-to with details to guide you on your own journey into the innards of your car.

It will be a look into the problems that can arise when working on any old car, especially Ferraris. I hope you enjoy the journey as I delve into a 45-year-old Ferrari.

I have a garage with a lift. If you are going to consider doing your own work, you MUST have a lift. Two posts, with arms, not ramps, and extra boards to drive upon to raise the car to a height so the arms will go under.

Choose something sturdy under the car to place each arm. A small thin piece of plywood can provide some cushion between the arm and frame. I know these are basic, but I want to start with some safety tips. Before the Ferrari gets too far off the ground, wiggle it to make sure it's stable.

I have worked on a lot of cars and after forty years or so, I still have ALL my fingers and the tips. Always, keep safety first. One of my better mottos is "If you are getting ready to do something stupid, be smart about it."

So, what is the plan? Fluids, filters, find that oil leak, adjust the valves, check the timing, both cam and ignition, and synchronize those wonderful Webers.

Oil and filter is the easiest thing to do so let's start there. Up goes the lift and find the drain plug. Gee, there is a lot of oil. Spend the next hour cleaning the drips off the bottom.

Did I get it all? Of course not, but at least I won't be dripped upon. Get a container for used oil. Get a LARGE container, a couple of milk jugs are not going to do.

Most Ferraris are like oil tankers. The 400 GT carries sixteen quarts. Let's see, divided by four, that's four gallons!

Did I say get a large container? Make sure it is transportable, you want to take it to recycling. Get new oil. Go to the auto parts store and get the recommended brand, type and weight.

I run 20W50, but then again it does not get that cold in Atlanta and I'm probably not going to drive it in the winter. Buy a couple of cases, you will need it.

I initially thought buying that much oil was expensive until I strolled into the Ferrari dealer and purchased two oil filters. Later I came to realize the filters were the cheap part of the process.

Drain and refill, change filters, write the date on top and done! Easy. With that project accomplished, what is next?

Oh, did I mention the reason I brought it into the shop was because the alternator decided to quit? Remove and send out to rebuild shop. Wait a week and retrieve.

Another little project accomplished. So far there are no major difficulties in taking things apart. Working on a Ferrari is almost easy. Go slow, keep track of the hardware, and take photos if necessary.

Since it is up in the air, I inspect all the hoses and decide the fuel lines from the tank to the carburetors really are forty years old and should be replaced.

Quick testing also shows one of the fuel pumps is bad. Thank goodness Ferrari put two on or I might have been left on the side of the road.

On a 400 GT there is one hose that runs from the fuel pumps by the left rear tire all the way to the engine compartment. This hose runs through the lower rocker panel with limited access at either end.

Now we are getting deep into the project. Remove the left side exhaust. No, not that easy. The bolts are rusty. A couple refuse to cooperate.

I learned a long time ago there is a Zen to working on cars. The bolt will only turn if it wants to. Your job is to convince the bolt that it wants to be removed.

A little heat, a little oil, a bit more heat, an attempt to turn. Talk nice to get friendly with the bolt. More heat and oil. One hour later one of the reluctant bolts begins to turn. Victory!

Another hour and the other has been convinced to join its brother on the workbench. Why does working on Ferraris cost so much? Because not everything should be man-handled or coerced to come apart.

Working on Ferrari automobiles requires patience, knowledge, and patience. Yes, I said patience twice. Everything you do will require thought and planning. Organization of parts to keep track of where it came from and what will need to have further work.

As one of my mechanics once said to me, "When working on Ferraris, school is out."

I hope you will enjoy this journey and appreciate the time and effort the mechanic puts into your Ferrari at the next service.

250 GT BOANO and ELLENA COUPE

250 GT ELLENA COUPE, S/N 0837 GT (1958). Red with tan interior. This long-lost Ellena was recently discovered in a garage, preserved in a largely original, intact unrestored condition. Documented by Massini. The engine has been reassembled and installed in the car, it will require a rebuild and need to be mechanically recommissioned before use. A worthy candidate either for sympathetic preservation or as the ideal basis for a complete concours-quality restoration. Sold October 1964 to Gerald Krupa in Illinois, from whose estate this car was discovered. 40,381 miles. $589,500. 4909

250 GT LWB BERLINETTA RE-CREATION, S/N 1657 GT (1959). Dark red. Originally a PF coupe, imported to the UK in a disassembled state without a powertrain in the late 1980s. Swedish owner commissioned Carrozzeria Auto Sport of Bastiglia, Italy, to construct a brand new TDF chassis, rather than modifying the PF chassis. Completed in 1996, the re-creation is powered by a 3.0-liter inside-plug Colombo V12 with triple Weber carburetors topped by velocity stacks and an air pan. Four-speed manual transmission with overdrive and 16" Borrani wire wheels, custom-made TdF-style seats trimmed in tan leather. Power-assisted 360 mm drum brakes, installed by Patrick Otis in Berkeley, California, in 2003. After spending time in Japan, the car was acquired by the seller in August 2021, and subsequent work has included major service, detailing of the red paint, installation of black carpeting, cosmetic refurbishment of engine ancillaries, and a rebuild of the electric fuel pump. Documents from 1987, images from the conversion in the 1990s, invoices from work by Otis. $1,050,000. 4905
